EU-Asia and the Re-Polarization of the Global Economic Arena (Advanced Research on Asian Economy and Economies of Other Continents) By Lars Oxelheim

At the end of the 1980s, a tri-polar world comprising the US, EU and Japan emerged. However, the economic turbulence of the early 21st century has destabilized this order, and the rise of other Asian powers has implications for the formation of a new economic configuration.

This book discusses the probability of the different tentative global economic power balances to emerge, as well as the different contestants: the EU, China and Japan, among others.

Organized into three sections, the first part addresses general and trend-wise developments with relevance to the outcome of the re-polarization process. Subsequently, three chapters focus on developments in China, India and Japan. Finally, special issues such as climate policies, corporate governance, social reforms and cross-border economic alliances are considered in greater detail, in relation to their implications for the outcome of the re-polarization process.

Readership: Postgraduate students, researchers in international and Asian economics/international relations; policymakers and analysts, business leaders interested in the multidimensional development of the global economic power balance.

Editorial Review

Review

"The book compares favorably to its competitors, both because of the breadth of the topics that are treated and because of the novelty of the research findings that are presented. It can be recommended to everyone with an interest in the re-polarization of the world economy and with an interest in the Asian economies." -- Journal of International Business Studies

"The book is an assiduous effort to provide fresh research-based policy suggestions in the world of re-polarization and in a time of profound economic depression. Given the book's sheer volume with 16 chapters, the fact that each chapter shows a high standard of scientific research is remarkable. The themes are well diversified and the allocation of chapters to each theme is adequate. Reading a scientific book like this provokes thoughts and gives ample opportunities to learn and form one's own ideas about what is happening, what are the challenges that need to be resolved, and how to do them in internationally-conflicting situations." -- Journal of Asian Economics

From the Inside Flap

At the end of the 1980s, a tri-polar world comprising the US, EU and Japan emerged. Nevertheless, the economic turbulence of the early 21st century has destabilized this old order and the rise of other Asian powers has implications for the formation of a new economic configuration.

This book discusses the probability of the different tentative global economic power balances to emerge, as well as the different contestants: the EU, China and Japan, among others.

Organized into three sections, the first part addresses general and trend-wise developments with relevance to the outcome of the re-polarization process. Subsequently, three chapters focus on developments in China, India and Japan. Finally, special issues such as climate policies, corporate governance, social reforms and cross-border economic alliances are considered in greater detail, in relation to their implications for the outcome of the re-polarization process.
