

Race, Class, and the Death Penalty: Capital Punishment in American History

By Howard W. Allen, Jerome M. Clubb

Download now

Read Online

Race, Class, and the Death Penalty: Capital Punishment in American History

By Howard W. Allen, Jerome M. Clubb

Examines both the legal and illegal uses of the death penalty in American history.

In Race, Class, and the Death Penalty, Howard W. Allen and Jerome M. Clubb examine historical trends in the use of capital punishment in the United States. Employing empirical data, the authors explore how frequently the death penalty has been used and how its frequency of use has changed, where the death penalty was used most often, the offenses charged, and the characteristics of the executed. Not surprisingly, their findings indicate that minority groups—particularly African Americans and those of lower social and economic status in general—have been executed in disproportionate numbers. The authors conclude that while the use of the death penalty has progressively declined, and the range of capital offenses has narrowed, disparities in the use of capital punishment between social groups and regions that appeared in the colonial period have persisted into the twenty-first century.

“...an exhaustive statistical analysis of the death penalty over the course of American history ... the most complete database of executions in the United State to date.” — American Historical Review

“...draws from and builds on an extraordinary data set compiled by M. Watt Espy, who gathered information on every execution in American history ... a very useful book.” — Journal of Southern History

“...pure quantitative history at its best ... an important contribution to the field.” — Journal of American History

“The authors have made ample (and intelligent) use of the Espy File Executions in the U.S. 1608–2002 at the Death Penalty Information Center, the most systematic database available on the history of capital punishment in the US ... Allen and Clubb provide a straightforward statistical portrait of capital punishment in the US from the Colonial era to the post-WW II period. The findings, while not surprising, are important for the simple fact that they rely on a highly respected database.” — CHOICE

“The long-standing practice of capital punishment in this country has been controversial almost from its inception, and the controversy has been particularly intense in recent decades. A careful analysis of the empirical facts of our historical practices is tremendously important, and the authors do a great service in collecting and assimilating many partial sources into what looks to be one of the most comprehensive and definitive treatments of empirical information on the use of capital punishment in the United States throughout its history.” — Carol S. Steiker, coauthor of Criminal Law and Its Processes: Cases and Materials, Eighth Edition

Howard W. Allen is Professor of History Emeritus at Southern Illinois University at Carbondale.

Jerome M. Clubb is Research Scientist and Professor of History Emeritus at the University of Michigan. Both Allen and Clubb have written several books, including their coedited volume Electoral Change and Stability in American Political History.

 Download Race, Class, and the Death Penalty: Capital Punish ...pdf

 Read Online Race, Class, and the Death Penalty: Capital Puni ...pdf

Race, Class, and the Death Penalty: Capital Punishment in American History

By Howard W. Allen, Jerome M. Clubb

Race, Class, and the Death Penalty: Capital Punishment in American History By Howard W. Allen, Jerome M. Clubb

Examines both the legal and illegal uses of the death penalty in American history.

In Race, Class, and the Death Penalty, Howard W. Allen and Jerome M. Clubb examine historical trends in the use of capital punishment in the United States. Employing empirical data, the authors explore how frequently the death penalty has been used and how its frequency of use has changed, where the death penalty was used most often, the offenses charged, and the characteristics of the executed. Not surprisingly, their findings indicate that minority groups—particularly African Americans and those of lower social and economic status in general—have been executed in disproportionate numbers. The authors conclude that while the use of the death penalty has progressively declined, and the range of capital offenses has narrowed, disparities in the use of capital punishment between social groups and regions that appeared in the colonial period have persisted into the twenty-first century.

“...an exhaustive statistical analysis of the death penalty over the course of American history ... the most complete database of executions in the United States to date.” — American Historical Review

“...draws from and builds on an extraordinary data set compiled by M. Watt Espy, who gathered information on every execution in American history ... a very useful book.” — Journal of Southern History

“...pure quantitative history at its best ... an important contribution to the field.” — Journal of American History

“The authors have made ample (and intelligent) use of the Espy File Executions in the U.S. 1608–2002 at the Death Penalty Information Center, the most systematic database available on the history of capital punishment in the US ... Allen and Clubb provide a straightforward statistical portrait of capital punishment in the US from the Colonial era to the post-WW II period. The findings, while not surprising, are important for the simple fact that they rely on a highly respected database.” — CHOICE

“The long-standing practice of capital punishment in this country has been controversial almost from its inception, and the controversy has been particularly intense in recent decades. A careful analysis of the empirical facts of our historical practices is tremendously important, and the authors do a great service in collecting and assimilating many partial sources into what looks to be one of the most comprehensive and definitive treatments of empirical information on the use of capital punishment in the United States throughout its history.” — Carol S. Steiker, coauthor of Criminal Law and Its Processes: Cases and Materials, Eighth Edition

Howard W. Allen is Professor of History Emeritus at Southern Illinois University at Carbondale.

Jerome M. Clubb is Research Scientist and Professor of History Emeritus at the University of Michigan. Both Allen and Clubb have written several books, including their coedited volume Electoral Change and Stability in American Political History.

Race, Class, and the Death Penalty: Capital Punishment in American History By Howard W. Allen, Jerome M. Clubb Bibliography

- Rank: #2503897 in eBooks
- Published on: 2009-01-01
- Released on: 2009-01-01
- Format: Kindle eBook

Download Race, Class, and the Death Penalty: Capital Punish ...pdf

Read Online Race, Class, and the Death Penalty: Capital Puni ...pdf

Download and Read Free Online Race, Class, and the Death Penalty: Capital Punishment in American History By Howard W. Allen, Jerome M. Clubb

Editorial Review

Review

an exhaustive statistical analysis of the death penalty over the course of American history the most complete database of executions in the United State to date. American Historical Review

draws from and builds on an extraordinary data set compiled by M. Watt Espy, who gathered information on every execution in American history a very useful book. Journal of Southern History

pure quantitative history at its best an important contribution to the field. Journal of American Histo

The authors have made ample (and intelligent) use of the Espy File Executions in the U.S. 1608 2002 at the Death Penalty Information Center, the most systematic database available on the history of capital punishment in the US Allen and Clubb provide a straightforward statistical portrait of capital punishment in the US from the Colonial era to the post-WW II period. The findings, while not surprising, are important for the simple fact that they rely on a highly respected database. CHOICE

The long-standing practice of capital punishment in this country has been controversial almost from its inception, and the controversy has been particularly intense in recent decades. A careful analysis of the empirical facts of our historical practices is tremendously important, and the authors do a great service in collecting and assimilating many partial sources into what looks to be one of the most comprehensive and definitive treatments of empirical information on the use of capital punishment in the United States throughout its history. Carol S. Steiker, coauthor of Criminal Law and Its Processes: Cases and Materials, Eighth Edition"

..".an exhaustive statistical analysis of the death penalty over the course of American history ... the most complete database of executions in the United State to date." -- American Historical Review ..".draws from and builds on an extraordinary data set compiled by M. Watt Espy, who gathered information on every execution in American history ... a very useful book." -- Journal of Southern History ..".pure quantitative history at its best ... an important contribution to the field." -- Journal of American Histo "The authors have made ample (and intelligent) use of the Espy File Executions in the U.S. 1608-2002 at the Death Penalty Information Center, the most systematic database available on the history of capital punishment in the US ... Allen and Clubb provide a straightforward statistical portrait of capital punishment in the US from the Colonial era to the post-WW II period. The findings, while not surprising, are important for the simple fact that they rely on a highly respected database." -- CHOICE "The long-standing practice of capital punishment in this country has been controversial almost from its inception, and the controversy has been particularly intense in recent decades. A careful analysis of the empirical facts of our historical practices is tremendously important, and the authors do a great service in collecting and assimilating many partial sources into what looks to be one of the most comprehensive and definitive treatments of empirical information on the use of capital punishment in the United States throughout its history." -- Carol S. Steiker, coauthor of Criminal Law and Its Processes: Cases and Materials, Eighth Edition

From the Back Cover

In Race, Class, and the Death Penalty, Howard W. Allen and Jerome M. Clubb examine historical trends in the use of capital punishment in the United States. Employing empirical data, the authors explore how frequently the death penalty has been used and how its frequency of use has changed, where the death penalty was used most often, the offenses charged, and the characteristics of the executed. Not surprisingly, their findings indicate that minority groups--particularly African Americans and those of lower social and economic status in general--have been executed in disproportionate numbers. The authors conclude that while the use of the death penalty has progressively declined, and the range of capital offenses has narrowed, disparities in the use of capital punishment between social groups and regions that appeared in the colonial period have persisted into the twenty-first century.

"The long-standing practice of capital punishment in this country has been controversial almost from its inception, and the controversy has been particularly intense in recent decades. A careful analysis of the empirical facts of our historical practices is tremendously important, and the authors do a great service in collecting and assimilating many partial sources into what looks to be one of the most comprehensive and definitive treatments of empirical information on the use of capital punishment in the United States throughout its history." -- Carol S. Steiker, coauthor of Criminal Law and Its Processes: Cases and Materials, Eighth Edition

About the Author

Howard W. Allen is Professor of History Emeritus at Southern Illinois University at Carbondale.

Jerome M. Clubb is Research Scientist and Professor of History Emeritus at the University of Michigan. Both Allen and Clubb have written several books, including their coedited volume Electoral Change and Stability in American Political History

Users Review

From reader reviews:

Karen Chan:

In other case, little men and women like to read book Race, Class, and the Death Penalty: Capital Punishment in American History. You can choose the best book if you appreciate reading a book. Given that we know about how is important a book Race, Class, and the Death Penalty: Capital Punishment in American History. You can add information and of course you can around the world with a book. Absolutely right, due to the fact from book you can learn everything! From your country until foreign or abroad you will be known. About simple issue until wonderful thing you can know that. In this era, you can open a book or perhaps searching by internet device. It is called e-book. You can use it when you feel weary to go to the library. Let's study.

Omar Hinojosa:

In this time globalization it is important to someone to get information. The information will make someone to understand the condition of the world. The health of the world makes the information easier to share. You can find a lot of references to get information example: internet, newspaper, book, and soon. You can view that now, a lot of publisher that print many kinds of book. The actual book that recommended to your account is Race, Class, and the Death Penalty: Capital Punishment in American History this publication consist a lot of the information from the condition of this world now. This specific book was represented how can the world has grown up. The language styles that writer require to explain it is easy to understand. The particular writer made some analysis when he makes this book. Here is why this book appropriate all of you.

Henry Brown:

Many people spending their moment by playing outside using friends, fun activity along with family or just watching TV the entire day. You can have new activity to shell out your whole day by reading a book. Ugh, do you consider reading a book will surely hard because you have to use the book everywhere? It okay you can have the e-book, bringing everywhere you want in your Cell phone. Like Race, Class, and the Death Penalty: Capital Punishment in American History which is having the e-book version. So , try out this book? Let's observe.

Roxie Gregory:

Is it an individual who having spare time in that case spend it whole day through watching television programs or just laying on the bed? Do you need something new? This Race, Class, and the Death Penalty: Capital Punishment in American History can be the reply, oh how comes? A fresh book you know. You are thus out of date, spending your time by reading in this new era is common not a geek activity. So what these ebooks have than the others?

Download and Read Online Race, Class, and the Death Penalty:
Capital Punishment in American History By Howard W. Allen,
Jerome M. Clubb #637O2X9N5IM

Read Race, Class, and the Death Penalty: Capital Punishment in American History By Howard W. Allen, Jerome M. Clubb for online ebook

Race, Class, and the Death Penalty: Capital Punishment in American History By Howard W. Allen, Jerome M. Clubb Free PDF d0wnl0ad, audio books, books to read, good books to read, cheap books, good books, online books, books online, book reviews epub, read books online, books to read online, online library, greatbooks to read, PDF best books to read, top books to read Race, Class, and the Death Penalty: Capital Punishment in American History By Howard W. Allen, Jerome M. Clubb books to read online.

Online Race, Class, and the Death Penalty: Capital Punishment in American History By Howard W. Allen, Jerome M. Clubb ebook PDF download

Race, Class, and the Death Penalty: Capital Punishment in American History By Howard W. Allen, Jerome M. Clubb Doc

Race, Class, and the Death Penalty: Capital Punishment in American History By Howard W. Allen, Jerome M. Clubb MobiPocket

Race, Class, and the Death Penalty: Capital Punishment in American History By Howard W. Allen, Jerome M. Clubb EPub

637O2X9N5IM: Race, Class, and the Death Penalty: Capital Punishment in American History By Howard W. Allen, Jerome M. Clubb