Editorial Review

Review

This charming story of two people who, to outsiders, might appear to be too different to fall in love. In actuality, they are able to establish a very strong bond because of similar needs, values, ideals, and attraction to each other.

Pamela Leigh Starr explores the universal theme of predestined love and romance but spices it up with the element of two races coming together and falling in love. The story line is straight forward, as it describes what happens when two attractive, intelligent, well-educated people meet and are able to see beyond the superficiality of the different skin colors and respond to the love they feel. The story is well written, and the theme is handled with delicacy and tact. Cleo Russelle -- Affaire de Coeur, November 1999

From the Inside Flap

Their first kiss was simple, yet it was powerful. Scott didn't want to scare her off by letting his control slip. Slow, he reminded himself, as he lightly touched her lips with his own, gently nibbling on them. It was torture, but he dared not trust himself to touch her in any other way, not yet.

Vanessa was in a state of wonder as Scott kissed her—wondering why she had waited so long to taste his mouth, wondering how lips so firm could feel so soft.

She wanted more. Much more.

About the Author

Pamela Leigh Starr was born and raised in New Orleans where she still lives and teaches elementary school. She is a graduate of Xavier University with graduate studies in mathematics at Loyola University. She is married and has three children.

Pam traces her writing career back to the 7th grade when she and a classmate collaborated on a illustrated short story entitled "The Terrifying Night." FATE is Pam's first Love Spectrum romance. She is currently working on her second novel, CHANCES to be released December 2000.
