Editorial Review

Review

“Through wit, poetry, and anecdotes, Lombard makes the case that the sincerest stewards of wild sea creatures are often those who intend to have them for dinner.” --Alastair Bland, NPR's “The Salt”

“An unusual tome: part guide to urban fishery, part poetic ramble, part collection of anecdotes, part recipe book, it advocates for an ethical, considered approach to fishing the waterways of the Northern California coast.” --Ellie Anzilotti, CityLab

“Really, the book is for anyone who loves the ocean because you can open it to almost any passage and learn and laugh.” --Tara Duggan, San Francisco Chronicle

“[Lombard's] direct, conversational writing style makes readers feel like they're learning the ropes from an old friend who tells it exactly as he sees it.” --Kristine Wong, Civil Eats

“A helpful reference for fisherfolk, cooks, coastal explorers, and anyone interested in our local marine environment.” --Kristina Sepetys, Edible East Bay

“Lombard is a divinely inspired whack job—think Frank Zappa meets Aldo Leopold. If you have ever considered the idea of gathering something good to eat from the beach or surf...you need this book.” --Bill Heavey, editor-at-large, Field & Stream

“Lombard is a master of the nearshore environment, knowledgeable (and hilarious). This is, simply put, the best book on this subject ever written.” --Hank Shaw, James Beard Award-winning author, Hunter Angler Gardener Cookbook

“The definitive guide to foraging the Northern Californian coast. Kirk has created an ecosystem that allows us to be sustainable citizens and, more importantly, sustainable eaters.” --Andrew Zimmern, James Beard Award-winning television host, Bizarre Foods with Andrew Zimmern
